Section B - Course Overview

This course provides comprehensive and structured professional development for theatre dance teachers who are working in professional, conservatoire, or higher education dance education settings. Preparing students for a robust career in dance teaching and training in a variety of dance techniques, the course equips students with comprehensive and systematic knowledge and understanding of dance pedagogy whilst developing independent research and reflective skills.

The course is distinctive in its flexible design and delivery. Carefully created as a distance-learning course, the ability for students to access this course from anywhere in the world has the potential not only to be global in reach but to fit in with the often unpredictable life of a professional dance artist. Allowing students to tailor their course to their other professional or personal commitments ensures the type of flexibility for postgraduate study that is unique in this subject area. Additionally, this flexibility is designed to meet the particular needs of dance professionals already working as dance teachers wishing to extend their existing practice and/or earn a more formal dance teaching qualification.

Section E - Learning, Teaching and Assessment

Learning and Teaching Strategy

The Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy at LSC keeps students at the centre, working in partnership toward a safe, stimulating, active and meaningful learning environment. As such, learning, teaching and assessment for the PGCert Teaching Professional Theatre Dance has been designed to be high quality, supportive, meaningful, effective, and engaging to prepare students for a career in dance education.

LSC operates an Enhancement Strategy with a specific section for Learning, Teaching and Assessment, which details the precepts against which learning, teaching and assessment initiatives, strategies and procedures are set. The main strategic objectives are to:

- Ensure the teaching faculty continues to reflect a level of excellence in the disciplines of dance and musical theatre education.
- Maintain effective (online) learning environments to engender active student engagement as creative artists and educators during their programme/course of study
- Design assessment to be meaningful and structurally aligned to learning outcomes
- Support teaching faculty to undertake CPD and assess its impact on the quality of the students' learning
- Provide access to data and research to inform the enhancement of teaching practice

These objectives are achieved through a number of strategies including: supporting, developing and mentoring staff; creating high quality course content; continually enhancing teaching facilities, learning resources and the VLE; and gathering evidence and impact narratives of concerted learning, teaching and assessment enhancements.

LSC assess the impact of this strategy regularly by monitoring student feedback, staff engagement with CPD, and student achievement and progression. LSC are proud of achieving Teaching Excellence and Student Outcomes Framework (TEF) Gold in 2018 and 2019 and take pride in the high-quality learning, teaching and assessment that takes place across the institution.

The course meets the educational aims of the University's Creative Education strategy through its creative performing arts roots; its holistic, inclusive, challenging and developmental curriculum design; its supportive and clear assessment strategy; its use of digital technologies as they relate to professional dance teaching; the student-centred approach to course design and enhancement; research led and international curriculum design; focus on employability in the dance teaching sector and education for sustainable design and exchange.

This course is designed with flexibility of the student experience at its heart. The course offers part-time and full-time modes of study, up to three entry points throughout the academic year and, as a distance-learning course, students may study from anywhere in the world with the possibility of fitting their studies around their other life and professional commitments in a way that works best for them. The course has a clear focus on developing students' independent study skills. Students are able to take control of their own learning in a number of ways, whilst maintaining strong connections to the learning community of the course and sharing experiences and learning through others' experiences.

Drawing from the wealth of research in distance learning pedagogy, the learning and teaching strategy for this course includes opportunities for both asynchronous and synchronous learning, the building of a strong community amongst students and staff, student choice and flexibility, a focus on building independent research and practical skills, and a safe and inclusive environment that allows students to put theory into practice through personal reflection and testing of ideas in their own teaching context.

The course is designed to provide graduates with the attributes and skills to innovate and create opportunity within the dance education sector; to work within and beyond this sector in all areas of dance education and beyond; and to bring the values of their creative practice to bear on the world in diverse and unexpected ways.

The acquisition of systematic and comprehensive levels of knowledge and understanding is achieved through distance learning activities such as preparatory tasks, webinars, lectures, seminars, guided reading, discussion forums, and individual tutoring from a team of experts by e-mail and telephone/video conferencing. Additionally, during the intensive induction teaching week, which students can choose to attend face-to-face or virtually, students will participate in practical workshops, 'macro' and 'micro' teaching as well as group and individual tutorials.

Cognitive development is achieved through reflective practice, peer group discussion and the individual tutoring system. Comprehensive critical skills are embedded in the reading and tasks in each Unit. Cognitive development is also achieved through professional practice in the form of teaching and critical reflection.

Practical skills will be honed and applied and the course will introduce students to key issues in dance and dance education practice. The development of practical teaching skills is strongly embedded in all aspects of the course and a particular focus of UTPT7003: Applying Pedagogy in Practice.

All tutor led activities will be undertaken by expert staff underpinned and informed by relevant research, including research published by staff designing and delivering the course. This allows for the research led teaching that will be expected of students to be modelled by staff.

Assessment Strategy

The assessment strategy for the PGCert enables the learning outcomes to be tested through a fair and inclusive assessment process that is clear to both staff and students.

Course Learning Outcomes have been mapped alongside the individual Unit Learning Outcomes, which are clearly assessed through both formative and summative assessment tasks. Such tasks allow students to be given feedback on how they are meeting the learning outcomes on a routine basis.

Wherever possible, inclusive modes of assessment are offered to ensure that students can meet threshold expectations without the need for alternative assessment based on individual needs. Assessments have been designed based on the good-practice advice from the guidance document: Inclusive Teaching and Learning in Higher Education as a Route to Excellence published by the Department for Education (DfE) (2017). For example, students are offered flexibility of choice in assessment to allow them to demonstrate their key strengths according to their individual abilities, interests and goals.

Offering a wide variety of assessment modes and types ensures that students are both supported and stretched during their studies. Such variety in assessment modes ensures that not one group of people are advantaged over another and all students are treated equally and supported to reach their potential.

Beyond informal formative feedback points across the delivery of each unit, students will additionally have the opportunity to engage with formal formative assessment. These assessment points allow students to demonstrate their progress in achieving the Unit Learning Outcomes and receive feedback that they can apply directly to their summative assessment.

All assessments, both formative and summative offer variety in assessment mode, reflecting the requirements of the profession. This variety contributes towards an inclusive approach in assessment, one of the aims of the UCA's Creative Education Strategy.

Section F - Employability

LSC has an existing strong track record of preparing students to enter the industry. While LSC does not currently have employability statistics for Postgraduate Courses, LSC is proud of its track record of strong employability statistics as demonstrated by our most recent Undergraduate Destinations of Leavers from Higher Education (DLHE) statistics (2019) showing that 97% of students were either in work or further study 6 months after leaving LSC.

The course has been designed in consultation with employers within the Conservatoire, Higher Education and Professional settings to ensure that the curriculum matches industry expectations and requirements. This consultation will continue in annual course monitoring to ensure that LSC keeps on top of changes and enhancements to employment expectations.

This course offers continuing professional development and recognition to teachers of dance who wish to develop their existing practice. In the world of dance education, many dance teachers do not have a formal qualification when the demands for such a qualification are ever growing. This course allows teachers to acknowledge their existing teaching practice, while enhancing it through the learning and the application of that learning they will do.

The curriculum has been developed with opportunities to focus on employment development while deepening existing dance teaching knowledge. The course has a focus on employability skills specifically relating to the dance teaching sector in a variety of different contexts. For example, students will be expected to demonstrate their planning, delivery and reflection upon a dance teaching experience. This opportunity to put theory into practice and then reflect upon this practice, is an exact requirement of the dance teaching profession and is explicitly linked to employment potential.

Other transferable employability skills including communication, self-motivation, collaborative working, openness, curiosity, commitment to personal development and challenge, time management and problem solving will be developed through the course and are embedded into all of the units.

Because this course is designed to be studied alongside an existing teaching practice, the skills developed will feed into existing employment while opening doors to future employment opportunities.

A commitment to the continuing enhancement of teaching practice and other wider professional values will be nurtured throughout. The applied, practice-based and industry-focused nature of the course means that the learning opportunities are directly relevant to teaching practice.

Employment engagement has been pivotal to course development and will be pivotal in its delivery. The course will be taught by experienced dance teachers/academics who are actively teaching and in senior management roles within the context of the dance education profession. Students will have master classes and guest lectures from employers helping to shape students' further understanding of the dance education industry with particular reference to conservatoire, higher education and other professional contexts.

Section G - Enhancing the Quality of Learning and Teaching

The course is subject to the University's rigorous quality assurance procedures which involve subject specialist and internal peer review of the course at periodic intervals, normally of 5 years. This process ensures that the course engages with the applicable national Subject Benchmarks and references the FHEQ

All courses are monitored on an annual basis where consideration is given to:

- External Examiner's Reports
- Key statistics including data on retention and achievement
- Results of the Student Satisfaction Surveys
- Feedback from Student Course Representatives
